

The Canadian Coalition for the Rights of Children (CCRC) is a network of Canadian organizations and individuals that promotes respect for the rights of children. Its purpose is to exchange information; provide public education about the Convention on the Rights of the Child; monitor implementation of the Convention in Canada; and engage in dialogue with government officials on child rights issues. The Convention on the Rights of the Child is the guiding framework for all activities of the coalition.

CCRC work for 2009

Monitoring: The Coalition will work with the National Children’s Alliance to present a civil society report on Canada’s progress toward realization of children’s rights during Canada’s Third Review. We plan to use the report for advocacy in Canada as well as in the review process.

Education: Public awareness initiatives include information sharing, a website, public presentations, public events, information for schools, and other awareness-raising activities.

Advocacy: The Coalition will continue to support child rights advocacy campaigns in Canada.
